

SANTA FE TEAM WINS EXCITING BASEBALL GAME

Ten Inning Game With a Score of Only 3 to 4 Runs--Many Interesting Features.

From Monday's Daily Citizen.

The Santa Fe excursion to Albuquerque yesterday was a grand success.

It proved a jolly holiday for the 300 people who took advantage of it, and the people of Albuquerque who turned out to show the visitors a good time.

Not a single incident occurred to mar the elegance of the day. The weather was calm and delightful, a gentle breeze from the mountains cooling the bright rays of the sun and banishing the "excessive" flushed cheeks of guest and host.

The excursion did not leave Santa Fe until 8 o'clock, an hour later than the scheduled time.

Five coaches composed the train and 350 people were on board. At Lamy the number was swelled by ten, as Cerrillos a half dozen were picked up and at Bernallito a dozen more increasing the original number to nearly 360 people. The train came through safely and without incident, other than a few short delays en route, arriving at the local station at 2:45 o'clock.

The arrival was the signal for a great cheer and a thousand Albuquerque people made the welcome a warm one.

Although the crowd was tired from walking an hour and a half, there was a show of enthusiasm on every countenance and the welcome was most cordial. Reception committees from the Commercial club and Elks Lodge were in waiting and the First Regiment and Italian bands burst forth with music.

Santa Fe ladies No. 100, R. P. O. E., occupied the rear car of the excursion train forty strong. When they alighted at the platform they were taken in charge by the local boys of the "Pups," and escorted by the bands, marching to the Elks luncheon room on West Gold Avenue, where cool and substantial refreshments in plenty were in readiness. All day long the banquet table was kept supplied. The supply of good things was inexhaustible. Previous to going out to the park the visitors were welcomed at the Commercial club. Judge B. S. Baker, president of the Commercial club, made a short address rendering the visitors the hospitality of the club and home, and making a few pleasant comments on the friendly relations existing between Santa Fe and Albuquerque and their relative interests.

An hour was allotted away with friends and relatives and then the throng began drifting toward Athletic park, which was to be the arena of the leading event of the day. Santa Fe had brought down a strong aggregation of ball players and a good game with the Indians was anticipated.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

For the benefit of the spectators The Citizen will explain the misunderstanding to the snootiest.

The patrician bairns whom he holds to throw the ball to the batter or to first base, but not when he fails to throw a ball to second or third base. Alarid was on second base when the dispute of yesterday arose.

In the fifth inning Parsons hit a home run past left field for three bases. Potts hit a little one to short and Parsons scored on Hollingsby's error. Gresham got a hit and Potts scored. The next three men up went down in order.

There was nothing more doing for the Indians until the first half of the tenth inning. Potts hit a little one to short and gained first on a double. He stole second and scored off Anderson's hit to the right field. That run won the game.

The Indians opened in the first inning by Cosgrave striking out. McDonald hit a little one to Lemke and was thrown out. Gresham a home run today on bunting and pleasure.

a nice hit past second base and by an error and a hit by Hollingsby scored. Hollingsby was recorded a score by another error.

The Browns had no possible chance of scoring in the next seven innings, although scattering hits were suffered from Lemke's riddles. Second base was as far as the runners ever reached. Tally looked pretty safe as the end of the game approached.

Although Starr had pitched what should have been a winning game, victory was now almost despaired of.

The last half of the ninth inning had arrived. Hollingsby was up and in less time than it takes to tell it, was down, having hit a little one to short, which he failed to beat at first.

Starr was next up. Two strikes and three balls," came the umpire's decision on free balls thrown. The next ball came over the plate and was caught square on the end of the bat. It went straight and far into the left field and was never recovered by the athlete. Starr had covered three bases. The grand stand went wild. French hit the ball to second base and Starr scored. The game was over. But in the tenth inning two Indians hit little flies and a third one struck out and victory was for Santa Fe. Line up:

Albuquerque--Cosgrave, first base; McDonald, catcher; Fluke, center field; Hollingsby, left field; Fluke, pitcher; French, second base; Quile, right field; Wilson, third base; Hollingsby, short stop.

Santa Fe--Alarid, left field; G. Parsons, catcher; Potts, first base; Gresham, third base; Anderson, second base; M. Alarid, right field; Cosgrave, center field; H. Alarid, short stop; Lemke, pitcher.

Summary.--Hollingsby hit .333, off Starr; 1 three-base hit; Parsons and Starr struck out, by Starr 19; by Lemke, 12; passed balls, McDonald; Hits 10, Starr, 2; off Lemke, 5; ten on bases, Santa Fe, 10; Albuquerque, 4; Lemke, Billy Mason; paid attendance, 1930.

The game at Athletic park closed at 7 o'clock and tired but happy the fans piled on the overtaxed street cars and returned to the city. The majority of the Elks and their friends left the cars at Fifth street and Railroad avenue and walked over to the Elks' badge, where the banquet table was spread and waiting.

During the evening the Alvarado and the station platform was crowded with the visitors and their friends. So large a crowd as attended the coming in the morning, was out to see the excursionists leave. At 2 o'clock the conductor called "all aboard," but the train was held several minutes, for strangers who might be tardy. As the train drew away those aboard it gave three long sheets for Albuquerque, and thus closed a happy day for the people of the Ancient and Albuquerque and their relative interests.

An hour was allotted away with friends and relatives and then the throng began drifting toward Athletic park, which was to be the arena of the leading event of the day. Santa Fe had brought down a strong aggregation of ball players and a good game with the Indians was anticipated.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.

Santa Fe won by a score of 4 to 2. It was the last game played on the local diamond this season. Several hundred people thronged the grand stand and the bleachers. It was a notable contest. Never before did a crowd of less than two thousand show more enthusiasm than the spectators of yesterday. Rooters for both teams were present in large numbers and they cheered their favorites lustily.

The Indians lost on account of the erratic play of the infield. Starck's pitching was much more effective than Lemke's, but his support was rare, especially at short.

The Indians went to bat. Alarid struck Parsons off second base. The ball bounded irregularly striking Vining in the eye, putting him out of the game. This accident weakened the Browns' infield, and no doubt resulted in the loss of the game. French was moved from first base to second. Cosgrave succeeded French on first and Finis went from the bench to center field.

Porter off a little fly into the right field and Quile got it. Potts and second base. Gresham struck out and Anderson was thrown out from second to first.

In the second inning Starr struck out three Indians, but Alarid was permitted to score on errors. The third inning passed without incident for the visitors, but in the fourth they had a kick. H. Alarid, who had been given two bases on balls, playing attempting to walk on third base, catching the ball held made a ball. Alarid had followed without off his base before the umpire had made a decision on the validity of Starr's action by failing to throw the ball to second. This rimmer was put out. This caused an argument. Anderson of the Indians got on his sweater and was going to quit. Santa Fe concluded that Starr talked, but the umpire knew the game. Alarid was out and the argument was patched up.

How It Happened.